

Liam McCarthy, MD

Fellowship-Trained Pain Management Physician

Dr. Liam McCarthy is a fellowship-trained interventional Pain Medicine specialist. Dr. McCarthy completed his residency of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation at New York University at the prestigious Rusk Institute. He went on to complete a fellowship at the anesthesia pain medicine program at Case Western / University Hospitals of Cleveland. He is board certified both in Pain Management and Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation. His training included the use of minimally invasive procedures done on an outpatient basis to diagnose and treat such common conditions as joint pain of the spine, disc-related problems of the neck and back to more complex pain-related pain issues. Dr. McCarthy has the distinct advantage of being trained in both a physical medicine and rehabilitation residency and an anesthesia-based pain fellowship to develop a more diverse approach to pain management.

Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Residency

New York University, Rusk Institute, New York, New York

Pain Management Fellowship

Case Western / University Hospitals of Cleveland, Cleveland, Ohio